SOURCE

During March 1954, source observed that the landing field at Mahlwinkel airfield was in poor condition; the soil was soft, particularly in the center, where a large quantity of earth had been raised. No further improvement work was planned for 1954 but, allegedly, further plans depended on whether the soil would settle in the course of this year or not. The field was still guarded by two civilians.

25X1 Comment. Information on the poor condition of the ground at Mahlwinkel airfield has continuously been received. There are no indications of any further improvement work.
